78% of Sudden Infant Deaths Occur Within Days of ‘Vaccines,’ Study Finds

By Frank Bergman • May 3, 2025 - 12:54 pm

An explosive study has confirmed that the vast majority of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) cases occur within the first week following routine childhood vaccinations.

The study analyzed official data from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention’s (CDC) Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS).

Statistics from the VAERS database were combined with peer-reviewed research for a groundbreaking new analysis.

Alarmingly, the study found that a staggering 78 percent of SIDS deaths occur within 7 days of the “vaccines.”

Shockingly, 58% of sudden infant deaths occurred within just three days of the injections.

In addition, two days post-vaccination shows a 69-fold increase in deaths compared to baseline expectations.

The findings were confirmed in six separate peer-reviewed studies.

The study was led by Dr. Neil Z. Miller of the Institute of Medical and Scientific Inquiry in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

The results were published in the renowned journal Toxicology Reports.

The study analyzed 2,605 infant deaths reported to VAERS between 1990 and 2019.

“The excess of deaths during these early post-vaccination periods was statistically significant,” the researchers concluded.

While the research was conducted in 2021, the study has gained fresh attention after it was highlighted by leading American pediatrician Dr. Paul Thomas.

Dr. Thomas is a board-certified fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics and a diplomat of the American Board of Addiction Medicine.

Thomas highlighted the findings during a new interview with Children’s Health Defense, the nonprofit founded by Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr.

“These vaccines are killing infants,” said Thomas, the author of Vax Facts.

“You took a healthy baby into the office, and they got a series of vaccines, and then you find them dead.

“The most deaths happen on the first day [post-vaccination] – Day zero.

“Then the next most common death day is day two. And then day three.”

“In my book, Vax Facts, the chapter on SIDS makes it really clear,” Thomas notes.

“If you look at the six studies that were well done that compared infant death to when they got their vaccines, and in the infant period, the TDAP is one of those really worrisome ones, 78%, if you put all six studies together, happened in the first week after the vaccine.”

In the “Abstract” section of the study’s paper, Dr. Miller writes:

“Although there is considerable evidence that a subset of infants has an increased risk of sudden death after receiving vaccines, health authorities eliminated ‘prophylactic vaccination’ as an official cause of death, so medical examiners are compelled to misclassify and conceal vaccine-related fatalities under alternate cause-of-death classifications.

“In this paper, the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) database was analyzed to ascertain the onset interval of infant deaths post-vaccination.

“Of 2605 infant deaths reported to VAERS from 1990 through 2019, 58 % clustered within 3 days post-vaccination, and 78.3 % occurred within 7 days post-vaccination, confirming that infant deaths tend to occur in temporal proximity to vaccine administration.

“The excess of deaths during these early post-vaccination periods was statistically significant (p < 0.00001).

“A review of the medical literature substantiates a link between vaccines and sudden unexplained infant deaths,” Miller asserts.

“Several theories regarding the pathogenic mechanism behind these fatal events have been proposed, including the role of inflammatory cytokines as neuromodulators in the infant medulla preceding an abnormal response to the accumulation of carbon dioxide; fatal disorganization of respiratory control induced by adjuvants that cross the blood-brain barrier; and biochemical or synergistic toxicity due to multiple vaccines administered concurrently.”

While the study found that 78% of SIDS cases occurred within 7 days of vaccination, other data has linked far more sudden infant deaths to vaccines over longer periods.

In a separate interview with CHD last month, Dr. Paul revealed that a staggering 97% of all sudden infant deaths happen within ten days of the child being vaccinated.

However, although the remaining cases of SIDS have not been directly attributed to vaccines, there is still a clear correlation.

He notes that the remaining 3% of sudden infant deaths happen between 10 and 20 days after vaccination.

Many would argue that these findings show that vaccines caused 100% of SIDS cases.

“SIDS is sudden infant death syndrome,” Thomas explains.

“There are six datasets studies that looked at SIDS when that infant died relative to when they got a vaccine.

“In one dataset, 97% were in the first ten days after the vaccine.

“Only 3% were in the subsequent ten days,” he notes.

“For the six other studies, a couple of them showed that fifty percent of the deaths happened in the first week.

“But 75 to about 90% of those deaths are happening in the first week after vaccines in all these studies.

“So, it’s real clear,” Thomas continues.

“You get a vaccine, your infant dies.

“We’ve known this for decades.”

The warning from Thomas comes after leading experts in Japan have issued a global alert to call for an urgent reassessment of worldwide vaccination programs after linking a recent surge in child deaths to “vaccines.”

A bombshell new study published in the Springer Nature peer-reviewed journal Discover Medicine raises the alarm over the issue after connecting several child deaths to “vaccinations.”

The study found that multiple children died suddenly after receiving standard childhood schedule vaccines.

The research team behind the study was led by Dr. Kenji Yamamoto of Okamura Memorial Hospital in Japan.

In the wake of Yamamoto’s, top Japanese experts have been calling for an urgent reassessment of global vaccination programs, particularly mRNA “vaccines.”
